As we go to press with this issue of the AIB Newsletter, we are busy getting ready for the July 5-8 meeting at the Hyatt Regency in Monterey, California. Program Chair Udo Zander, Institute of International Business, Stockholm and his team have put together a fantastic program.

Local Arrangements Chair Harvey Arbeláez and his team are finalizing the last details for the hotel and the fabulous gala to be held on Monday night at the Monterey Aquarium. The AIB Secretariat is working over-time to get everyone registered, and to get the program and proceedings to the printer on time.

We expect the meeting to be one of the largest ever, with eight concurrent sessions running over three days. The weather in Monterey should be a cool sixty-eight degrees (20° C), a great escape from the normal summer heat of the Northern Hemisphere. Please see the overview of the meeting program on pages 4-7. The complete program and other conference details can be downloaded from the AIB Web site at http://www.aibworld.net/2003. I hope that you will be able to attend this important event. See you in Monterey!

Dear Colleague

My words in my first “letter from the President” (4th Quarter 2002) that we live in interesting times have come back to haunt me! Not only are we helping to bed in a new editorial team at JIBS but we will soon have the challenge of bringing on board a new editor of Insights and a new Executive Secretary and Secretariat. I, and many past Presidents, would like to acknowledge the eight year tenure of Jim Wills as Executive Secretary, his able assistant Laurel King and the whole team at Hawaii. We will be able to honour them formally at a later date and their diligence and efficiency will be difficult to match. The renewal of AIB goes on and although changes are difficult, my Executive Board are determined to improve AIB’s already strong position. Progress in India and China (the Asian giants) continues and I hope to be able to say more in concrete terms in a later Newsletter.

World events, too, move on apace. Circumstances such as we are living through make it difficult to deny the existence of interdependence between peoples and nations around the globe whether we apply the term “globalisation” or not to the increase in the interaction across national frontiers. International elements in business, politics and culture are not optional add-ons, they are central to 21st century existence. We should celebrate our privilege in being at the forefront of recognising internationalism as a key element in any analysis of social phenomena, however “domestic” we pretend them to be. The national media of many countries (and the USA here is a particularly bad offender) cannot pretend that the rest of the world deserves only a few minutes (or pages) a day. Often even that is restricted to “their” impact on “us”. More “we” less “us and them” is the mark not of an optimist, but of a realist.

Sarianna M. Lundan (University of Maastricht) announces the publication of an edited volume entitled Network Knowledge in International Business in the New Horizons in International Business series (2002, Edward Elgar Publishing, ISBN: 1840648708). This book brings together innovative research on the increasing strategic importance of subsidiary networks to the multinational firm. It combines contributions from three major related areas of inquiry: the changing theoretical conception of networks and the structure of the multinational firm, the importance of spillovers and agglomeration economies related to multinational investment, and the management of the flow of information and knowledge from subsidiaries to headquarters and vice versa. For more information, please visit http://www.e-elgar.co.uk.

Ram Mudambi (Temple University and the University of Reading (UK)) has just released a volume (joint with Pietro Navarra and Giuseppe Sobbrio) entitled Economic Welfare, International Business and Global Institutional Change published by Edward Elgar. The book should be in bookstores by June 2003. The volume examines the impact of institutions on international business and entrepreneurship and eventually on individual welfare.

Stephen Young (University of Strathclyde), Stephen E. Guisinger (University of Texas) and Thomas L. Brewer (Georgetown University) have co-edited the recently released seminal book, The New Economic Analysis of Multinationals (Edward Elgar Publishing, Inc., 2003, ISBN 1-84064-154-1). The volume rigorously analyzes central topics in international business research while emphasizing a new dynamic research agenda, for theory, for empirical research and for public policy.

Earl Honeycutt of Elon University, John Ford of Old Dominion University, and Antonis Simintiras of University of Wales, Swansea have written a new book: Sales Management: A Global Perspective (London: Routledge, 2003, ISBN 0-415-30444-4). This text differentiates itself from existing sales management from a managerial perspective, a cross-cultural approach makes this book essential reading for sales management students and sales managers seeking to succeed in global sales. Besides covering a diverse range of topics, ten original case studies are included, featuring companies from the U.S., Europe, New Zealand, and Asia, are included in the text. All are designed to give sales students, salespeople, and their managers an explanation of what diverse cultures entail, and the dilemmas, situations, and problems that arise when selling across borders. Jonathan Doh (Villanova University) and Hildy Teegen (George Washington University) announce publication of their edited volume, Globalization and NGOs: Transforming Business, Government, and Society (Praeger Books, 2003). NGOs have emerged as important stakeholders in discussions over the terms and conditions under which business, government, and multilateral institutions manage the process of globalization. In this book, the contributors track the growing importance of NGOs in an increasingly integrated global economy. Drawing from examples in the areas of international trade, the environment, economic development, human rights, and bio-agriculture,

Members on the Move

MAHMOOD A. ZAIDI (Carlson School of Management at the University of Minnesota) has recently been elected a Distinguished Fellow of the North American Economics and Finance Association (NAEFA). NAEFA was founded in 1972 as an educational association dedicated to intellectual inquiry in all areas of theoretical and applied research related to economics and finance. Zaidi has also recently co-published GLOBAL SKILLS SHORTAGES (2002) with Malcolm Cohen. His work with Malcolm Cohen develops an operating concept for measuring labor shortages in the global context which has public policy implications for assessing the global capacity to meet occupational shortages across countries.

FIONA CHEETHAM, MORVEN MC EACHERN AND RICHARD PEARCE have joined the Marketing Group at the University of Salford, UK. FIONA CHEETHAM’S interests are consumer behaviour and consumption – particularly with regard to collecting – and ethnography. She believes a contribution to consumer behaviour theory can be made by drawing on ideas generated in the fields of material culture and ‘process’ sociology and is currently researching the actor networks of collecting and consumption. MORVEN MC EACHERN’S interests also lie in Consumer Behaviour, in addition to Marketing Communications, Social Marketing and Retail Marketing. She is currently applying a modelling approach to researching Quality Assured Labelling Schemes, with specific reference to Rural and Urban Purchasing Behaviour. Finally, RICHARD PEARCE’S interests include cultural/social dimensions to (international) marketing communications, marketing ethics and the sociology of consumption. He favours qualitative/interpretative/critical methodologies, especially discourse analysis and is currently employing discourse analysis to evaluate ethical issues in environmental advertising.

Authors describe how governments and business have responded to the emergence of NGO influence, and demonstrate how NGO activism has changed corporate strategy and public policy. They suggest that NGOs now exert a strong influence on corporate strategy, public policy, and business-government relations, and therefore cannot be ignored. The book offers observations and insights regarding ways in which NGOs advance their agenda, and provides suggestions for how government officials and corporate officers can make the best of their cooperation and collaboration with NGOs.
